

How, Where and When to Vote in Upcoming Elections

Election Day is Tuesday, Nov. 8, 2022. There are several details you need to know in order to vote. Review the following information from the U.S. government regarding how, where and when to vote.

How to Vote

First and foremost, if you plan to vote, you must register to become a voter. Every state requires this except North Dakota. Check with your state's election office for more details about when and how to register. Further, you may already be registered to vote and can check that information online.

Voting can occur on Election Day or through absentee or early voting. Here's an outline of these options:

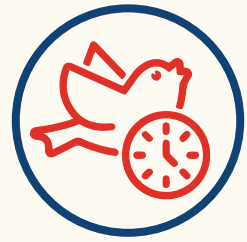

Voting on Election Day

If you vote in person on Election Day, most states require you to bring a form of identification. Check your state's requirements before heading to the polls.

Utilizing absentee voting

If you are unable to vote in person on Election Day, absentee voting allows you to vote beforehand by mail or drop box. Although every state has absentee voting, rules on who can take part vary. In most states, you do not need an excuse to vote absentee. In some states, however, you may need to request an absentee ballot to be able to do so.

Leveraging early voting

Use this map to see if your state allows early in-person voting. Additionally, check with your state or local election office for early voting dates and rules in your area. Depending on your state, you may need to check under "absentee voting" if you do not see information listed for early voting.

Where to Vote

If you are planning on voting in person on Election Day, you will need to locate your polling place. Your polling center assigned to you is based on your residential address. This location is where you are expected to vote, so it is important to know where to go. Your name will not be on the roster at any other location.

When to Vote

In-person voting will take place on Election Day. Be aware that hours of operation may differ between polling locations. If you are utilizing absentee or early voting, review the information provided within your ballot, as the required mail-in date may differ by state.

If you are able and planning to vote, make sure you review what is required ahead of time. Knowing how, where and when to vote will make it easier and more efficient for you to cast your ballot.
